Dodging the bullet:

'As far as we're concerned, John O'Reilly lied to us'

by STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Reporter

Victoria-Haliburton MP John O'Reilly may have dodged a political bullet by missing Tuesday's final gun vote, but angry local gun owners say his credibility is shot.

O'Reilly, who repeatedly vowed to vote against his Liberal government's new gun control legislation — and risk being thrown off parliamentary committees and possibly out of caucus — was absent from third reading in the House of Commons.

O'Reilly was in Washington with four other MPs attending an international conference on food and agriculture.

While some gun-owners may have given O'Reilly the benefit of the doubt when he fell ill and missed Bill C-68's second reading vote two months ago, he may not be so fortunate this time.

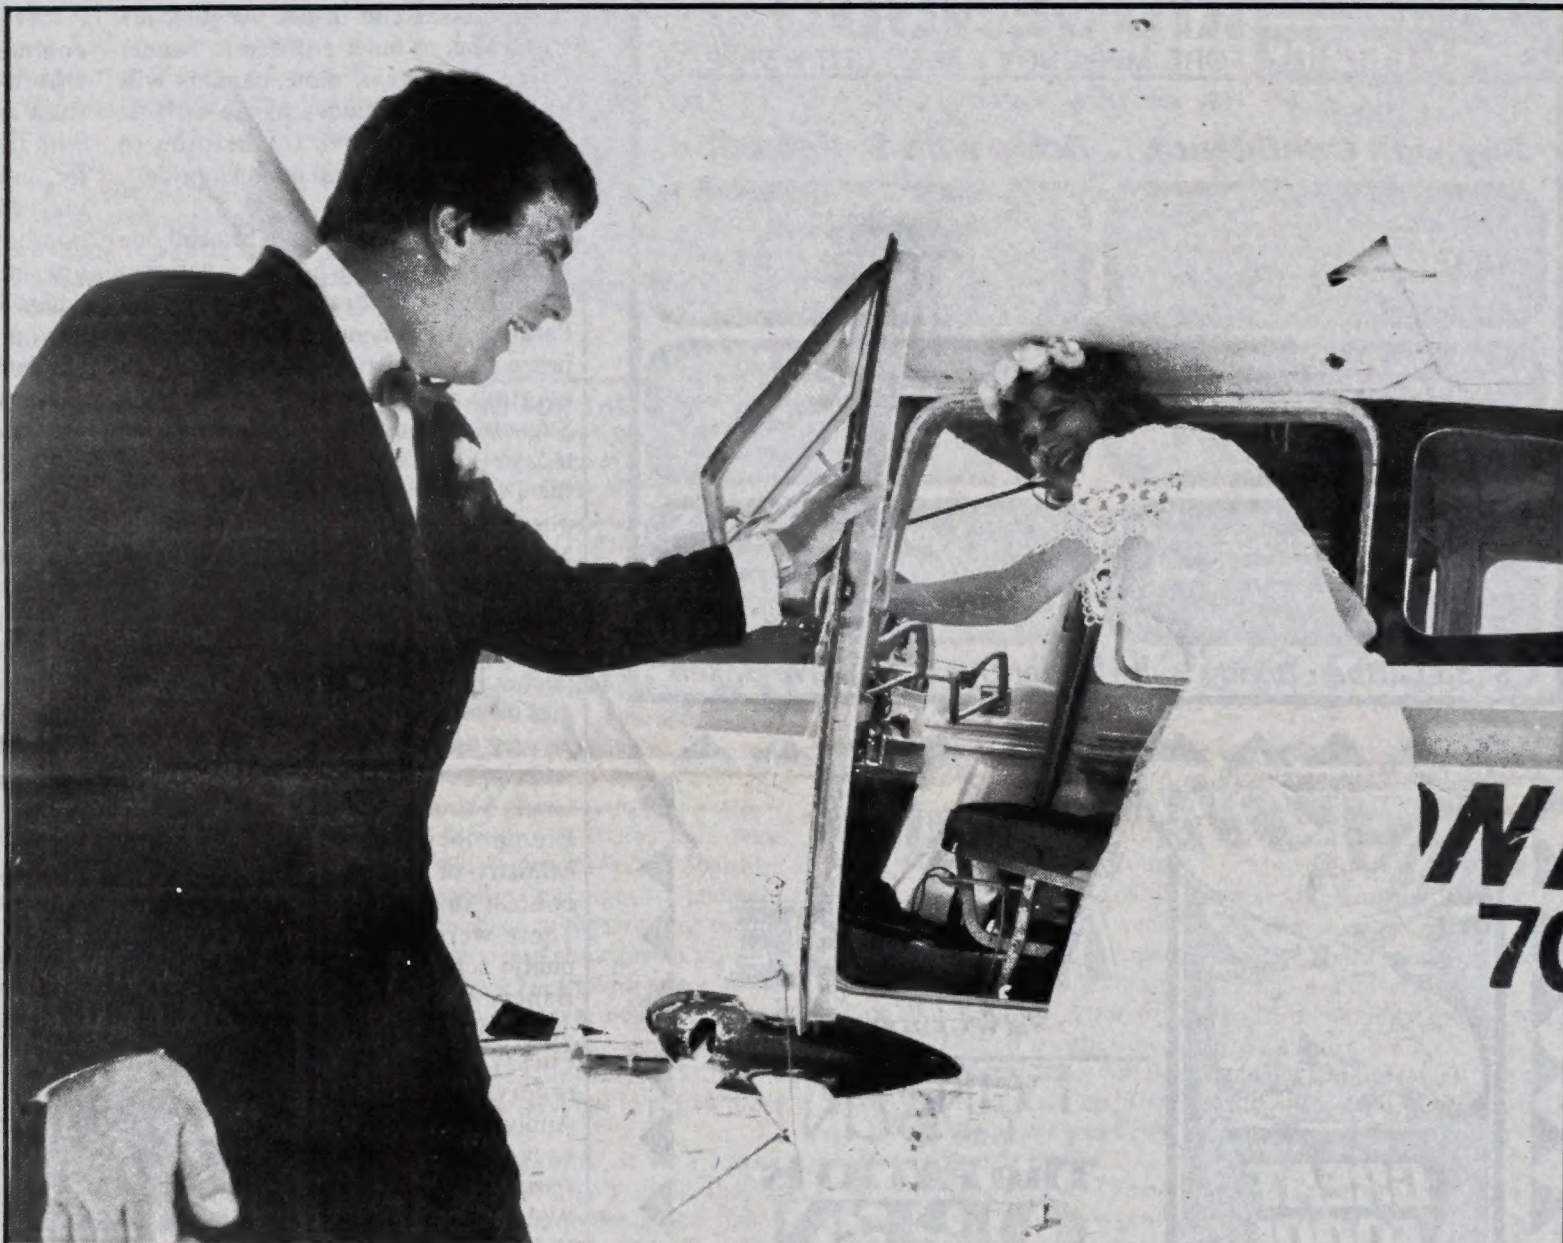

"We've just had it with Mr. O'Reilly. We're really upset with him. As far as we're concerned, he lied to us," says Ted Vasey, president of the 500-member Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association.

O'Reilly may have kept his committee seat in parliament and status within the Liberal party, but Vasey says he's lost the trust of local gun-owners.

"He betrayed us. He assured us umpteen times that when it came to the third reading he'd be there for us to vote against it and he ducked it again... This is a very important issue relating to all Canadians and our representative wasn't even there."

On what was one of the coldest days of last winter, more than 1,100 opponents to the legislation showed up to a rally in

DREAMS TAKE FLIGHT: Last spring, Boonerville cartoonist Charlie Teljeur didn't want to propose to his girlfriend, Gina Deighton, in the old "wine and candlelight" way. So he got his two cartoon characters, Gus and Woody, to pop the question on the Echo's editorial pages. Well, he didn't want to get married in the old "walk up the aisle way", either. On Saturday at Head Lake docks, Gina's father, Len, helped his daughter into the plane which would take her to the wedding ceremonies at the Teljeur family's resort, Deer Lodge. Congratulations!!

Dysart has new sewer line problem:

Too many people want to hook up to Kashagawigamog extension

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

Public uproar over a sewer line on the north shore of Lake Kashagawigamog has turned around so far that it now may not be possible for everyone who wants to join onto the line to hook up.

"(The situation) has completely reversed," says Dysart et al Reeve Murray Fearrey.

The number of property owners who want to connect to the sewer line has increased steadily as the hook-up charges have dropped.

Original estimates placed the cost of hooking up to the line as high as $10,000 to $12,000 for some property owners.

However, the engineer now says property owners will have to contribute between $3,500 and $3,800 towards the installation of the sewer line.

On top of that fee, they will also have to pay a hook-up charge of between $1,500 and $2,000 on average to connect their homes and cottages to the main line.

"The biggest problem we've got now is people wanting to get on (the line)," said Fearrey. "We don't know if we are going to have enough money to get them on."

He said residents on roads currently not included in the proposed service area may be added to the line if they want to be and if the line can be extended to their properties within the allotted budget.

The province is picking up about 75 per cent of the $5.4-million construction cost of the line. The remainder of the cost is to be shared equally by those who use the system.

Last Monday Dysart council approved an amended version of the sewer line plan, including branches servicing properties on Peninsula Drive and Kashaga Drive.

The amended plan has to be given the go ahead by the Ministry of Environment and Energy before council can tender the project.

Fearrey said construction of the line should begin in the fall and be completed by the spring.

Dave Clancy of Thorburn Penny, the engineering firm handling the sewer line extension, told council surveyors will be out at some point during the next four to six weeks to plot out the course the line will take.

He said council should be able to apply to the province to receive its approved funding in about a month.

Clancy spent most of the day last Monday going door to door speaking with property owners along the proposed route of the line who had requested further information.

"Most of the people I've met with so far have been fairly positive," he told councillors.

Fearrey said the expansion of Dysart's sewage treatment plant, which is necessary to accommodate the hundreds of properties that will be added to the system next spring, is scheduled for completion this month.

Hat's off to the Haliburton BIA. The main street is a wash in colour, thanks to the red and white maple leaf flags hanging from every hydro pole. It's amazing how it makes the whole street look a little brighter. This is all part of the BIA's three-year plan to beautify the village. After Canada Day, the flags will be replaced by banners for the School of Fine Arts. When those classes end in late August, the BIA plans to have a different banner flying. Next year, more banners will be added at entrances to the village. Once again, thanks for helping to instill a little civic and national pride.

The Echo's poet laureate has had one of her poems published in a national anthology of verse. Eva Stata of Parklane Apartments in Haliburton has just achieved distinction by having an original poem published in Island Sunsets, an anthology of the best of today's Canadian poetry published by the Poetry Institute of Canada. The poem is entitled "The Saviour's Master Plan." The Poetry Institute is enthusiastic to encourage Canadian poets by sponsoring contests that are open to the public and by publishing poems in widely distributed anthologies of verse.

Congratulations to Nicholas Coty, a Grade 5 student at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School. He won the Ministry of Natural Resources poster contest in the Grade 5-6 category. There were 180 posters from seven public schools in the Haliburton and Bancroft areas. They answered the question "How Can We Prevent Forest Fires?" on their posters. The winners receive a Smokey the Bear 50th Anniversary frisbee and baseball cap, as well as fire prevention materials sponsored by Schwandt Homecare in Wilberforce and Emmerson Lumber in Haliburton.

The Trent University graduating class of 1995 includes three students from the Highlands: Darryl Winder of Gooderham received his Honours Bachelor of Arts; Brian Claridge of Haliburton received his Bachelor of Science; and Michael Carr of Haliburton received his Bachelor of Arts. Congratulations on their success.

The Old Country House in Haliburton is once again honoured by being mentioned in the Where to Eat in Canada guide by Anne Hardy (Oberon Press.) Chef Chris Carl is commended for his expanded menu which includes home-made pasta, roast lamb with basil and garlic, steak with five vegetables and roquefort butter, and Chris's own bread pudding, "a marvellous creation served with hot bourbon." If this is making you hungry and you're planning a visit anywhere in Canada, it would be wise to buy a copy of the guide at the Haliburton restaurant. (Keep your eyes closed when you go by the dessert display, though.)

Meanwhile, several resorts and tourist destinations were featured in the recent Toronto Life weekend escapes article. Special mention was given to The Domain of Killien, Wigamog Inn, Sir Sam's Inn, Haliburton Forest and Sir Sandford Fleming College's School of Fine Arts. The Highlands seems to be holding its own against other tourism destinations this summer.

After devoting many years to the Heart and Stroke Foundation, Joyce and Al Gostock are stepping down from the local chapter's executive. That doesn't mean they're no longer involved with the chapter, of which they're still active members. But they're just giving themselves more time for their other pursuits.

The Ontario Healthy Communities Coalition's second community meeting is open to all residents of Northern Victoria County. It is on June 26 at Ridgewood Public School, Coboconk at 7 p.m.. Please come and share in the future of your community.

Ball fans will soon have all the bases covered

by STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Reporter

Die hard Toronto Blue Jay fans will soon have all the bases covered as Baton Broadcasting's CFTO Channel 9 is expected to be added to the local cable package in the coming weeks.

While the technical glitches still have to be ironed out, Haliburton Minden Cable TV is in the process of adding the station to its roster of channels.

While many Blue Jay baseball games are available to local cable viewers on CBC and The Sports Network, a good portion — 35 to be exact — are covered by CFTO, which was cut off from local cable 10 years ago because of poor reception.

The recent CRTC approval of Baton's application for repeater transmitters in Orillia and Bobcaygeon, now in operation, has opened the door to extending the signal into cottage country.

"We're all very excited to be bringing CFTO to viewers. They've been trying for years to get up here and it will better serve the community," says HMCTV owner Peter Wessner.

Assuming the signal is of high enough quality, the station will likely be on the air in the next couple of months, perhaps even sooner, he said, cautioning that extensive electronic work will have to be carried out before adding the station to the current cable roster.

For Blue Jay fan Don Fevreau, the additional games couldn't come a moment too soon. The Harcourt Park real estate broker can access the channel at home through satellite but when he has had to spend time at the Haliburton Hospital for an illness he's battling, "I have to settle for Wheel of Fortune instead."

With the Bobcaygeon transmitter now operational, the channel is available on UHF channel 54. For it to be added to the cable network, it would have to be converted down to another channel. For residents without a satellite or access to cable, channels 21 and 54 carry CFTO, but depending on where you live the picture will likely be poor.

Wessner, while not giving away secrets, says that two more high profile stations, one American and the other Toronto-based, could soon be "coming down the pipe" and added to the local cable package in the coming months.

User fees threaten to drop curtain on local theatre group

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

Members of Haliburton's only theatre group say the board of education's charges for using its schools are threatening to put them out of show business.

Debra Dart told trustees at the board's management committee meeting Tuesday the Highlands Little Theatre will be "$1,000 in the hole" if it has to pay its most recent bill.

"At this rate, it won't take long before we will no longer exist thanks to this added financial burden," she said.

However, that burden may be lifted, at least for the time being. The management committee is recommending the board put the theatre group's bills on hold until it can review its policy regarding user fees.

Currently, non-profit groups are permitted to use the board's schools free of charge on weeknights until 10 p.m., said superintendent of business administration Jim Bradley. After that they are charged by the hour, plus an additional hour for the custodial staff to clean up. They are also charged on weekends when the school is closed.

The Highlands Little Theatre considers itself a not-for-profit organization, but feels it has been charged by the board as though it were a money making venture, said Dart.

"It can be argued that we are not a non-profit group, but I ask you, if we don't charge, how can we exist?" she asked the committee.

Any profits the group does make are used to finance the next performance or buy necessary theatrical equipment.

Dart said the theatre group made a profit of only $200 from its last production, A Moon for the Misbegotten, which played at the high school in early April.

However, the school board has sent the group a bill for $1,218 to pay for use of the high school gym for several rehearsals and performances.

She asked the board to reduce the bill to $658.50 by cutting $399 for the weeknights it used the school for performances, as well as the cost of a $160.50 electrical hook-up the group installed in the gym for its lighting equipment.

School board chairman John Munro supported the theatre group, arguing the board's user fees should be designed to offset the costs incurred in keeping schools open for outside groups, not to make a profit.

"Community groups such as these are tremendous assets to the community," he said. "... I feel the board should be encouraging, not discouraging, non-profit community groups to use our facilities."

In a later interview, Bradley said the board does not make any profits from user fees.

On a related topic, Dart said the theatre group's executive committee would like to be involved in any discussions about turning the high school's small gym into a theatre if, or when, it is to be transformed.

The board has said it will leave the gym untouched by the renovations that will be carried out at the high school in the event that a community group steps forward with enough funding to make it feasible to develop it as a theatre.

Dart also hinted the theatre group would be interested in taking over Victoria Street School when it is abandoned by the school board.

She said other cities, such as Peterborough and Cobourg, have given old buildings to theatre groups.

"The groups have renovated the inside and maintain that part of the building, while the town has taken care of the outside restoration and maintenance and charge the groups a token fee of $1 per year by way of taxes," she said. "We will soon have such a building in our community called Victoria Street School. I feel it's worth considering."

Dangerously dry conditions force MNR to cancel fire permits

The Ministry of Natural Resources has cancelled the issuance of all fire permits.

The fire danger rating is high to extreme throughout the province and the Ministry is asking residents and recreational forest users to use extreme caution with all fires used for cooking or warmth.

Twenty-three new wildfires were reported in the province Thursday, bringing this year's total to 617.

M.N.R. fire personnel have been fighting forest fires in Saskatchewan and Northern Ontario for the past two weeks with no relief in sight.

The hot, dry weather continued for the weekend and the M.N.R. hired auxiliary staff in the event of more fire starts. 15

FIREMEN CLEAN UP: With the swish of a chamois, Dysart volunteer firemen raised $600 at Saturday's popular car wash in Haliburton. For $5, volunteers such as Bob English, above, gave people's cars a thorough going over. The money will be used for future equipment purchases.

O'Reilly 'prepared to take the heat'

by STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Reporter

Victoria-Haliburton MP John O'Reilly says he's "prepared to take the heat" from local gun owners accusing him of breaking his promise to vote against Bill C-68.

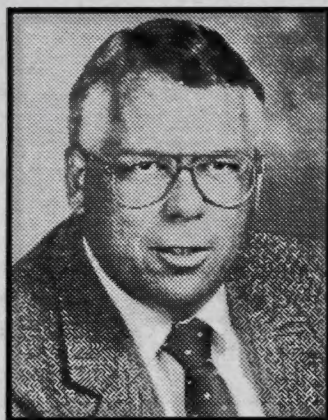

By attending a Washington conference on food and agriculture which kept him away from Tuesday's third reading gun vote in the House of Commons, "the best thing that could have happened to the riding happened," O'Reilly said in a telephone interview Friday from Ottawa after arriving from back from the trip.

O'Reilly, who repeatedly promised local gun owners he would defy Liberal party ranks and vote against the legislation, said constituents will benefit in the long run.

"If it hurts me, so be it. I have no regrets. I think that most people want me to continue to be an effective Member of Parliament and not be on the bad side of the party or the Prime Minister," said O'Reilly, referring to the political consequences nine other Liberal MPs face for voting against the legislation.

Protecting his ability to repre-

"To impale yourself with your own sword would be silly": John O'Reilly sent the best interests of the riding is more important than making a political statement, he said. "I have to look at the dollars coming into my riding. The money for organizations like SIRCH and other programs and the $30 million in infrastructure programs... I want to continue to get as much money as I can into Haliburton," he said adding that "if it costs me personally, then that's what I'm here for."

O'Reilly maintains that he kept his promise to gun owners and says he'll continue to fight the legislation.

"I said that if I was there, I'd vote against it and I wasn't there. If you're going to go into politics you have to be prepared to take the heat and if people don't think that I represented them then that's unfortunate."

O'Reilly said there was no way of knowing what week the vote would be held.

With the margin of difference in the vote so large (192 to 63), O'Reilly says it would have been political suicide for him to vote against the legislation.

"It's like going into a battle and shooting yourself on the first hill. Why be the hero? All you have to do is look at the number of votes it won by. It was a done deal so to impale yourself with your own sword would be silly."

O'Reilly said he intends to make a presentation during senate hearings on the proposed gun laws and that "the battle is not over yet. The legislation must still receive approval from the senate "and I don't think it will get it."

While the Liberal MPs who defied their political masters in favour of their constituents' wishes are expected to be dealt harsh punishment, O'Reilly says he doesn't anticipate any repercussions for vocally opposing the legislation.

The dissident MPs, he added, deserve their penalties. "Politics is a team sport and if you're not on the team then you should be running with another party."

Gun owners question MP's absence

Haliburton in which O'Reilly told protesters he would vote against the legislation if mandatory registration of all firearms was included in Bill C-68's final draft, which it was.

Minden gun-owner Arnold Mann says he's skeptical of the importance of the meeting O'Reilly was attending in Washington last week. "To find out that he was having a little vacation at taxpayers' expense in the United States when he knows how strongly his constituents feel about the issue is a disappointment... As far as I'm concerned he's a two-faced liar," says a furious Mann, who called the Echo to voice his displeasure.

Mann was "willing to give him the benefit" when O'Reilly failed to attend the second reading vote, but he isn't so forgiving this time.

"He could of hopped on a flight back to Ottawa for the vote (Tuesday) to represent his constituents," said Mann, who added "I would have gladly chipped in a couple of hundred dollars" for the return flight ticket.

O'Reilly defended his decision to attend the Washington meeting in a telephone interview Friday. "This wasn't some Mickey Mouse thing I went to. There were more than 50 nations represented at it," he said. The conference was "a strategy-planning session" which will help plan the future of rural Canada, he said.

"This wasn't just some last minute thing, it was planned weeks in advance," O'Reilly said, adding the date the legislation was to be voted on was unknown until last week.

The four other MPs who accompanied O'Reilly to the conference were all supporters of the gun legislation and would have voted in favour of it had they attended third reading, said O'Reilly.

Tuesday's vote, which resulted in a final 192-63 tally, ended a long, emotionally-charged debate dividing rural and urban communities.

Nine Liberal MPs who voted against the legislation face discipline for their actions.

Not all local gun owners, however, are holding grudges against O'Reilly for missing the vote.

Even if O'Reilly's registered a nay in the House of Commons, the legislation would still have passed easily and "there were probably more important things to be doing," says Dan Buhl, Haliburton representative for the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters.

"If (O'Reilly) was attending a meeting that was important to the future of this country then that is important. At least this way he doesn't break his word. The vote wouldn't have made a difference anyways."

The legislation's passage, though, is still "very, very disappointing to say the least," says Buhl. "Everybody is upset whether you are a collector, hunter or Olympic target shooter."

The legislation's most controversial element is the mandatory registration requirement for the roughly seven million firearms Canadians own, to begin in 1998. Gun owners who fail to register will face the possibility of fines and/or jail.

While it has now been formally passed by the House of Commons, the legislation must still be approved by the Progressive Conservative-dominated Senate, which could attempt to block the Bill's passage.

Gun collections can still stay in the family

Antique gun collectors who own soon-to-be-banned weapons can still pass down firearm relics to their children under Bill C-68.

Among the most significant amendments to the gun control law is the right to pass on as a family heirloom a gun of historical significance, originally prohibited in the legislation.

Many of the firearms to be outlawed under the new laws include collector items, such as the World War II Luger. Under the amended legislation, handguns made before 1945 are permitted to be handed down to a family member, as long as that person is licensed.

The punishment for failing to register a rifle has also been slightly toned down for first-time offenders. A person who inadvertently fails to register would be subject to a summary offence with a penalty of up to $2,000 and/or six months in prison.

Police search and seizure powers, which critics charged were to broad and Draconian, have been curtailed to keep in line with present inspection guidelines.

Inspectors are required to give "reasonable notice" before entering a home or business and the search must be confined to the area of the home or business where firearms or collections are stored.

Local high school teacher recognized for her work with teachers' federation

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Local math teacher Louise Cooper has become the first local member of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation to be honoured with an Award of Merit.

The West Guilford resident has been with the OSSTF since she began her teaching career in 1961. Shortly after she moved to the Highlands in 1969 she became involved with this division and district. She is now entering her fourth term as president of the Haliburton OSSTF and will once again be president of the district which includes Victoria County.

The award was presented at an OSSTF meeting last week.

"The OSSTF wears two hats," says the enthusiastic and committed local president. "It's a protective organization and does all the things unions do. We've helped to get excellent working conditions for teachers. The organization is strong and gives us a voice."

It also provides professional development. When the Ministry of Education introduced de-streaming in Grade 9 two years ago, it was the OSSTF which provided manuals for the teachers. The Ministry had no documents on how the new system was to be implemented.

That's been one of the frustrations of working with the past government (the social contract being another.) "Particularly in the last few years, the decision making process has by-passed teachers," she says. "We weren't consulted about de-streaming and yet we're supposed to implement it."

Some people think the OSSTF is too strong, but Cooper argues that "teachers' working conditions are students' learning conditions." Happy teachers are better teachers, and the profession has become quite stressful in recent years because of all the changes and new demands.

"You never leave it behind," says Mrs. Cooper, who's the head of the math department at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School.

She's optimistic about working with the new provincial government. Premier Mike Harris is a former trustee and Diane Cunningham, who's touted as the next education minister, "certainly has very reasonable viewpoints."

Despite all the changes and stresses, Mrs. Cooper doesn't regret her decision to become a teacher. "I would never have done anything else in life."

Two accidents happen on same highway, same day

Police News

On June 12, Apsley OPP investigated two motor vehicle accidents in the same area of Highway 648, between Harcourt and Wilberforce.

The first accident occurred at approximately 3:00 a.m. A motor vehicle eastbound on Highway 648 at a high rate of speed entered the ditch and rolled. The driver fled the scene before police arrived. Further investigation resulted in several Highway Traffic Act charges being laid against a Harcourt man.

Later that day at approximately 1:45 p.m. Apsley OPP received a report of another accident in the same area. James Kalka of Bowmanville was westbound on Highway 648 on a motorcycle when he entered the ditch after swerving to avoid hitting a ground hog. As a result, Mr. Kalka sustained minor injuries.

There were no charges resulting from this accident.

Is 'workfare' workable?

Creating and implementing the welfare program will be a tough job

by STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Reporter

Creating and implementing Premier Mike Harris's workfare program could be a "mind-boggling" job in itself.

As sensible and simple as the Progressive Conservatives' work-for-welfare idea sounds, the actual task of making it work will be a complicated one for Ontario's new provincial government, says Haliburton County Director of Social Services Morris Honeyman.

And now that voters have given the PCs the mandate to overhaul the welfare system, the time has come to take a closer look at the idea and the plethora of issues which surround the concept.

While the Harris-led government has yet to take office, social service administrators are already asking questions about just how the workfare program will be carried out.

Honeyman, who's responsible for overseeing the 590 present welfare cases in the county, says it's too early to say whether or not the concept will be a workable solution to end the cycle of dependency many recipients fall into.

"What kind of workfare will it be? Are they just going to be clean-up jobs where you put people out on Hwy 35 to brush the side of the road? Then what happens when the job is finished? Or are you going to give people the training in a job which gives them future opportunities for employment — because that's what we need. We don't know yet so it's hard to say whether or not it is viable."

Honeyman raises numerous other questions such as how the program will be carried out in rural communities.

A program which may work in a large city won't necessarily be viable in a rural area like Haliburton.

"Are they going to supply the transportation to a work site because you can't take the bus here like in the city," he says. "You can't expect someone with no car to just show up at a work site. You've got to be human."

He also wonders who will be responsible for administering the program, expected to cost about $500 million to set up. "If we have to get into financing the administration for this then we are going to need more staff and that could be quite expensive."

Who will pay the cost for worker's compensation? Will welfare cheques now be subject to federal income taxes and benefits deductions like UIC and Canada Pension?

"There are millions and millions of questions that need to be looked at. There are just so many aspects to the concept it that it's mind-boggling," Honeyman says.

Depending on the type of work which is provided under the program, Honeyman raises the concern of whether the program will reduce job opportunities for high school and college graduates and possibly infringe upon the territory of work covered by unions.

"If we are talking about jobs that nobody else is going to do then fine, you're not hurting anyone. But will they be jobs that will displace others into the unemployment ranks? Does this then take the college student who would have had the job and put them into the unemployed line? If that's the case then what is the purpose?"

Honeyman says the idea behind the workfare concept is sound as long as it gives the recipient "the motivation to wake up in the morning" and creates the opportunity for future employment.

"Will they create make-shift jobs or jobs with a future. I just hope it will lead to jobs for people at the end of the road because that's what we really need around here."

As far as Harris's promise to axe welfare cheques by 20 per cent, Honeyman has similar questions. The impact such a drastic cut will have on recipients — which could range from devastating to minimal, he says — will depend on where the cuts are made.

In a telephone interview with the Echo Thursday, Victoria-Haliburton Progressive Conservative MPP Chris Hodgson attempted to answer some of the questions Honeyman raised.

Hodgson said the workfare program, which is intended to be set up during the next year, "won't take away other people's jobs. We're trying to improve the job market, not lay off others."

Mothers with children under the age of three, he said, won't be forced into workfare, and seniors and the disabled will be taken out of the welfare system and put into another program, Hodgson said. "We'll have to take all of those concerns into consideration and see what works and go from there..." "We want to make the welfare system so that it's not a trap that people can't get out of and I think everyone agrees that the idea is needed and long overdue."

"There are millions and millions of questions that need to be looked at... it's mind-boggling."

ANSWERING THE CALL: Two children will be able to enjoy a week at camp thanks to the ongoing generosity of workers at the Bell Canada office in Haliburton. Every month they donate part of their paycheque to a "Community Fund" and the most recent recipient is the Victoria Haliburton Summer Camp Foundation. Here, Bell employee Jim Winn presents a cheque for $500 to Barb Fraser, the Foundation's local representative, while Bell's Bob Picard, Joe Bradford and Mel Watson look on.

Echo wins national awards

Ninth year in a row paper named among top three in circulation

For the ninth year in a row, the Haliburton County Echo has been judged one of the top three newspapers in Canada in its circulation category.

The Canadian Community Newspaper Association has also announced that The Echo has won three other awards in this year's national competition.

In the General Excellence category for broadsheet newspapers with a circulation of 4,500 to 6,500, The Echo came third in Canada. The first place winner in the CCNA's Better Newspapers Competition is the Willams Lake (B.C.)

Tribune. Second was the Orangeville (Ont.) Banner.

In this category, The Echo came in third for Best Editorial Page category.

The competition has several categories which are open to all community newspapers within broader circulation class.

The Echo's Christmas edition came first among newspapers with a circulation of 4,000 to 12,500. The newspaper acknowledges the outstanding efforts of staff reporter Peter Downs, who wrote most of the stories, as well as staff reporter Stephen Shaw and editor Martha Perkins for their contributions. This is the first time the Echo has won this category.

Our Fall Tour supplement came second in the Special Section category for all newspapers with circulations up to 6,500. The first place winner is Ganges (B.C.) Gulf Islands Driftwood. The Fall Tour is a perennial favourite with judges — and the people who use it as a guide to visit some of the Highlands' prettiest places in autumn.

"We're very pleased that once again the efforts of everyone at The Haliburton County Echo have been acknowledged by our peers," says Echo Editor Martha Perkins. "Of course, we have to face our most critical judges every week and it's our readers who make sure that we continue to strive to be a strong and vibrant voice for the Highlands. We thank them, and our advertisers, for making this another successful year and encourage them to let us know how we can make The Echo a better newspaper."

Play proceeds to help stop domestic violence

by STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Reporter

If recognizing the realities of domestic violence at an early age is the key to stopping the cycle of abuse, then Dale McConnell's Gr. 8 Archie Stouffer Elementary School class is a positive sign for the future.

At the suggestion of students Shirleen Dehaan and Naomi Stephenson, the $180 in proceeds raised from admission the recent student theatrical production of 'The Beverly Hillbillies' has been split up into two and donated to both the Women's Emergency House and the Minden Hospital.

Susan Wilson, community liaison worker for the emergency house, says it's an encouraging sign that today's youth are becoming increasingly aware of the issues of domestic violence.

"I think being aware that it exists helps them recognize it if they encounter it in their own lives and they will be aware of the resources there are to counter it," says Wilson.

While 25 years ago spousal abuse was rarely a topic of conversation among students, McConnell says today it's an issue that can't be avoided.

"Students have more knowledge about it today. They talk to friends and they know that there's violence in the homes. They become more aware of it and the fact that it's not normal," he says.

Loggers must do some of MNR's work

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Under a new provincial funding formula, the local Ministry of Natural Resources office won't have enough money to take care of our forests.

But that doesn't mean there will be an end to such things as tree marking and tree planting. There will just be someone else paying for some of it — loggers who cut trees on crown land.

"We can't pay for all the necessary silviculture with the income we'll be receiving so some tenders will include work to be done at your own expense, so you have to take that under consideration when you bid," MNR forester Peter Hynard told a group of eight loggers at an information meeting at the Minden office two weeks ago.

It used to be that when a logger won a tender to cut on crown land, the cheque was made payable to the Ministry of Finance and the money went into general coffers. Not any more. The province has set up a new fund for each area office. Money from trees cut in that area will go into the fund, which will be expected to pay for the office's forestry costs.

In the next five years, the Minden office estimates loggers will pay a total of $1.1-million for trees cut on crown land. Of that money, the Minden office will get $528,000. With that money, the MNR office has to pay wages of silviculture workers as well as other costs such as tree saplings.

FEE STRUCTURE DOESN'T CUT IT: The Minden office of the Ministry of Natural Resources recently invited local loggers to find out about new forestry rules. Here, MNR forester Peter Hynard goes through the fine print with Jamie, Glenn and Rick Sisson of Adanac Forest Products of Dunsford.

Not only will the loggers be expected to do extra work, but the fees they pay to the government may also be higher in some parts of the province. (The complicated new fee structure does not affect local loggers contracts very much because all of the Minden MNR's contracts will be tendered out.)

To protect loggers and help ensure they can make money on the tenders, the MNR will clearly spell out what is required in the tender. Some of those jobs MAY include: marking, girdling, tramping, herbicide, prescribed burn, tending and stand improvement.

As another way of protecting the loggers, the MNR won't put out tenders unless it's sure the loggers can make money on the bids. This is particularly true for stands which include a lot of poplar, or other types of trees which do not fetch high prices.

The changes are part of the Crown Forest Sustainability Act, which replaces the Crown Timber Act. As the name implies, one of the goals is to ensure long-term sustainability.

"I like the principle of (forestry) paying its own way; I don't like the rates so much," Hynard said. The prices for loggers must pay for trees such as poplar may be appropriate in the north, but he says he'll try to convince the Sault Ste. Marie office that the figures need some adjustment for this area, where poplars aren't as marketable. With the province's proposed fee structure, local loggers could lose money if they took poplar to a mill.

"We don't like the set up any more than you do," Hynard said, after the loggers shook their heads with incredulity when they saw the fee structure.

"We're just a small part of the province. We're hoping the rate structure will find a more reasonable rate for us."

Another notable feature about the new act is its stronger enforcement bite.

"The charges you can end up with are a fair bit different," said Ross Wray, a senior technician for Minden South. Under the old act, loggers who illegally take trees from a property, crown or private, had to pay one to five times the value of the timber. Now, the MNR can also levy an administrative charge up to a maximum of $15,000 or five times the value of the lumber removed.

"One advantage it gives to us is that under the old law there was not much consideration to things other than trees, such as cutting roots of nearby trees and crossing creeks," Wray said. The charge was based on the market value of the trees and since small trees weren't marketable, the logger didn't have to pay for them before. Now he will.

As well, under the new legislation, the MNR can now issue stop work orders, which force the loggers to quit cutting immediately. The MNR can also attach conditions, such as a rehabilitation order, with all expenses being paid by the logger.

The new act makes for provision of criminal charges with a maximum fine of $100,000.

"A lot of this is common sense," said logger Ross Warburton. "I've been in places where the (previous) guy-should never have been on a skidder."

Plane needs paint job

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at Dysart et al council's regular monthly meeting last Monday.

Plane upgrades

Council has agreed to help pay for a new paint job for the old war plane that looms over the highway at Haliburton's southern entrance.

Dysart will give the Haliburton Legion up to half of the $17,000 it will cost to spruce up the CF100 aircraft. The Legion will be responsible for the remaining share of the cost of the makeover.

"There's only one place in Canada that you can get the paint for it," Reeve Murray Fearrey told councillors, explaining why the paint job will be so expensive.

As we, he said, there are very few people who do restoration work on older aircraft.

Land donation

Sylvia Sisson wants to donate a piece of property she owns in West Guilford to the municipality to be used as playground in memory of her husband, the late Holly

Sisson.

The land is currently occupied by the Grand Orange Lodge, which is no longer used and has to be removed for safety reasons, she says in a letter to council.

The property was deeded to Mr. Sisson, who was born in the hall, by the Orange Association when it closed the lodge.

Council plans to invite Mrs. Sisson to its July property committee meeting to discuss exactly how she wants the piece of land used.

No phone

A number of Redstone Lake cottagers were surprised when they arrived at the lake's landing in May to find the public telephone booth missing, according to a letter from Stephen Garrod

He said many cottagers rely on the phone for their guests to notify them they have arrived at the landing and need to be picked up by boat.

Councillor Dan Kay said Bell removed the phone booth at the request of a property owner who no longer wanted to allow the company to locate its phone on his land.

Council has agreed to allow Bell to place a phone booth on a piece of its property near the landing.

Lake levels decline, TSW re-opens several locks

The Trent Severn Waterway between Fenelon Falls and Trenton is back open for boating business after being closed for more than a week.

Heavy rainfall the week before caused rivers and lakes in Haliburton County to fill past capacity. The lake levels have since declined to 96 per cent capacity.

TSW officials are still warning boaters to take extra caution when out on the water. Areas above and below dams should be avoided because of strong currents, and navigation buoys are submerged or out of position in some areas.

Life is a beer commercial

This is a comment to local high school students.

Although it's sometimes difficult to believe, everyone remembers what it is like to be young. Your generation is not the first to be afflicted by hormones and pangs of independence. The adults you see today probably did the same silly things their children and grandchildren are doing.

Everyone can also remember the sweet bliss of the last day of school. After 10 months of responsibility and being cooped up inside a classroom, it's only natural to want to break free of the constraints of school and enjoy a little youthful camaraderie.

No one begrudges you your youth. When people see you gathered at Head Lake Park on the last day of classes, they smile knowingly, saying to themselves "teenagers will be teenagers." The smile disappears, however, if they also notice you are drunk. Then they begin saying all those boring things teenagers expect adults to say. Blah, blah, blah.

But before you shrug off adults' displeasure as sheer jealousy, remember that many of those adults have also, quote, invested in your future. Local property taxes pay almost 70% of the costs of running our schools. That means each property owner pays hundreds of dollars of hard-earned cash to make sure local students have the knowledge and skills they'll need once they graduate. People believe in the system, they believe that society has an obligation to its younger members and they're willing to pay for it.

It's not very encouraging, therefore, when they see some teenagers – and it was only some of you – confusing the natural desire to celebrate with the belief that the drinking becomes the celebration.

On Wednesday afternoon, when you gathered at Head Lake Park to herald the beginning of summer, the Minden OPP had to be called in. Three drinking-related charges were laid. Those people who think today's teenagers are immature and witless were given every confirmation they could ever ask for. You probably made it harder for the kids who want to celebrate the end of school next year. Now there will probably be more rules, more attempts to discourage such a gathering at the park.

Why did an afternoon of fun have to include alcohol? Why did you have to make adults feel you're not yet able to handle the responsibilities that come with freedoms?

This isn't some old-fashioned lecture about the values of abstinence. Drinking in itself isn't wrong, it's our attitudes towards it that seem to be getting more and more warped. Just ask the exchange students who come from countries with far more liberal drinking laws. In Europe and South America, it's not uncommon to see teenagers drinking at an outdoor cafe. It's an acceptable social tradition, part of the cultural fabric for young and old. A couple of beers stretched out over an afternoon, the sun shining, the laughter flowing, and everyone walks away with another nice memory.

Compare that to North America. Some of those exchange students have told The Echo that they find parties in Haliburton to be incredibly boring – everyone's too drunk to have a good time. Although statistics say the number of teenagers who drink is declining, those who drink are drinking more. Too many teenagers drink to get drunk. Don't ask them which brand of beer they prefer, because they only remember the taste of throwing up.

Being drunk has supposedly become a sign of maturity, proof that you're no longer little kids. Little wonder, however, if others now think you're not old enough to be allowed to have a party at the park. If you really want to be accepted as responsible, mature members of society, then you're expected to follow society's rules, and one of them discourages drinking in public areas – for the very reasons that you demonstrated on Wednesday. As one of the local police officers said after Wednesday's incident, "there would be nothing against drinking if people didn't act like (fools) when they do it." M.P.

Letters to the Editor

Paramedics are needed, but who pays for training?

To the Editor:

After reading the May 30 article on implementing paramedics into Haliburton, I had mixed feelings.

I agree with Mark Lowell that there should be paramedics in our rural areas. It's the way that we are expected to pay for the training of these attendants that bothers me. Anyone who wants to upgrade their professional position goes back to school and takes on the responsibility of financing it themselves, teachers do it, nurses do it, doctors do it, without even a thought that someone should be subsidizing their education for them. If we employed an RNA, and needed an RN, would we finance her or his education to become an RN?

The article read that nine attendants would have to be trained. I don't know how many ambulance attendants work between Haliburton and Minden but this number seems to be a bit excessive. Wouldn't one paramedic per shift be adequate? We are not just talking of the initial cost of training, at $100,000, but of the future costs of salary increases as well.

The financial burden on health care is so great that we can't keep hospitals open or keep sufficient nursing staff on duty. I find it hard to put even more of a burden on the taxpayers.

Highlands Brass band a rare treat

To the Editor:

The York minstrels and Highlands Brass gave the residents of Haliburton a rare treat on Saturday, June 10. I went to the performance not knowing what to expect and was overwhelmed by the talent. It turned out to be a joyous fun-filled evening.

Our own home-grown Highlands Brass did an exceptional job and should be given many more opportunities to show off their professionalism.

NORTHERN LIGHTS

Virginia Muenzel

HAVE YOU NOTICED the incessant hum of lawn mowers and weed-whackers echoing through the hillsides lately? It's all that rain, you know. It was awhile coming this spring, but once it started raining, all that green stuff burst forth from the earth. Ed, and all the neighbours have been on their riding mowers ever since. When he finally runs out of gas, there's at least six other lawn mowers within earshot. And since nobody has delegated one lawn mowing day, there always seems to be one running somewhere.

Even with me pushing a small mower around all the tight places, and doing my share of the weed-whacking, we can't finish it in one day. We did it to ourselves. This used to be a lovely hay field. Once upon a time we could get some farmer to come one or twice a summer to cut and bale and haul it all off. Then we got this tree-planting brainstorm. That was four or five springs ago. Fifty red pines, fifty blue spruce, fifty maples, and fifty red oak trees later, it dawned on us that we would not have to keep all that grass mowed in order to keep track of the sapling trees. In fact, it's just this last year that the oaks have begun to look promising. A few of the maples are actually taller than us. In a couple more years we will have a virtual wall of evergreens. In the meantime, even allowing wide strips of the field to go to wildflowers, by the time Ed gets the last of the grass cut down by the lake, it's up to our ankles in front of the barn. The only time he's not on the darned mower, is when he's hovering over or under it, fixing it.

I'm on my hands and knees, most of the time, meditating over the weeds in the garden. This week, I've spent a lot of time tying up the sugar snap pea vines. God willing, we'll have a bumper crop. Enough to satisfy Barb, and Bill, and all the summer people. I learned, early on to always add, 'God willing,' because, no matter how healthy those vines look today, one little hail storm can turn the whole thing into a big tossed salad in less than two minutes. Just a couple of weeks ago, in the middle of that nasty storm, while the wind was swirling through the trees, and the lightning streaked angrily across a menacing sky with a faintly green cast, Ed and I could be found standing at the windows praying, "Please, God, no hail!"

We've obviously made too much work for ourselves. It occurred to us far too late, that most people who have this much yard work to take care of, also have enough money and sense to hire a full time gardener to do it. The worst part of it is that it's taken us fourteen years to get the whole place to where it is now, and now that we've got this far, we're getting too old and too slow, and too tired to keep up with it.

And yet, in spite of the creaks in our bones, and the fact that we're usually asleep about five minutes after the chickens, and we're always at least one list of jobs behind, we really wouldn't change a thing. Because almost every day, we take our 'walk around the block', white cat and white dog in tow, from the barn up by the road, to the dock down by the lake. We each check out what the other has managed to accomplish, while noting the break in the fence, the weak board in the dock, the dead branches on the elderberry bushes. But most of our leisurely stroll is spent in awe-some admiration of the new growth on the trees, the current wildflowers in the grass, the bitter standing stock still amongst the willows in the swamp, the geese flying overhead, and a hundred million other little wondrous surprises we had little or nothing to do with.

It's all a gift. Even the work, because it's good for us. We've been allowed the wonderful opportunity to spend our golden years embracing this little piece of God's green earth. We crumble the earth in our hands, smell its richness, plant a seed in it, and watch it grow. In return, we get food to nurture our bodies, and a panoramic beauty to nurture our souls.

But we've got to get back out there. That bad storm somehow broke loose a couple of the old logs on the back end of the old barn. And the high water rushing down the lake weakened a section of the dock, and there's two garden beds I haven't even touched yet, and there's still fifty some more potatoes to hill up, and...

'We crumble the earth in our hands, smell its richness, plant a seed in it and watch it grow. In return, we get food to nurture our bodies, and a panoramic beauty to nurture our souls.'

Pic of the Past

This week's Pic of the Past is an old post card showing the Haliburton Post Office on Highland Street across from the Cenotaph. In its second life the building was used by Bell Canada and was then included in a redevelopment project by Mike and Lynda Easton in the eighties. The building is now the location of Bwana Johns and the Haliburton District Real Estate Board. Our thanks to the Haliburton Museum for providing the post card. More post cards showing local scenes can be found in this week's issue of County Life.

Those perfect phrases

ANNECDOTES

Anne Creelman

WELL, IT'S HAPPENING again. I find myself opening my mouth and out pops my mother's voice. With increasing regularity, my husband and I are relying on those old standby phrases that we once scoffed at when we were children. I'm not sure whether it is effective parenting or more likely, reflex action. It sure is funny how they all come back to you.

Dinner hour is always a good time to bring out all of the old classics. Sometimes I think it was easier when the kids were babies and couldn't comment on what was being shoveled into their mouth. I now find I need some help from the masters to negotiate getting a meal into them. Some good ones are:

"How do you know you don't like it if you won't even try it?"

"Stop picking everything out and just eat!"

"I think it's time for a little less talk and a lot more eating."

"Variety is the spice of life, THAT'S why you can't have Kraft dinner every night!"

And the all-time winner,

"You eat everything on that plate. There are children starving in (country of your choice) who would be glad for that food!"

Then there is the whole sibling thing that requires another section of the unwritten parent code book. These are just a few I use but I'm sure everyone has their own favourites.

"How can two people who are best friends one minute be tearing each other's hair out the next?"

"She's following you everywhere because she admires you and that should make you feel pretty special!"

And the ever-popular,

"Sure, it's all fun and games until somebody winds up in tears. And mark my words, somebody will end up in tears."

There are the everyday situations that just require a litany of those lines you used to cringe at when they were used on you. Now find myself trying desperately to remember them.

"If all of these toys aren't picked up by the time I get back, I'm giving them away to kids who can appreciate them."

"When you have children of your own then you can make the rules but until then, we'll go by what I say."

"I don't have a favourite, I love each of you the same amount but just in different ways."

"Fair! Who ever said life was fair?"

I know that with young children, we haven't even hit our stride yet and we'll probably be forced to bring out the big guns when the teenage years hit. I'm already trying to keep a record of such classics as:

"If everyone else jumped off a bridge would you follow along just because it was the thing to do?"

"It's up to you to know the difference between right and wrong and I know you do."

"I don't care what they do at so-and-so's house, this is what we do here!"

"Just do your best. That's all I can ask of you."

I guess we fall back of these old favourites because when all is said and done, they really do make a lot of sense and for the most part, we didn't turn out too bad. I guess much of the reason for that is because there were some other classics that were also always used:

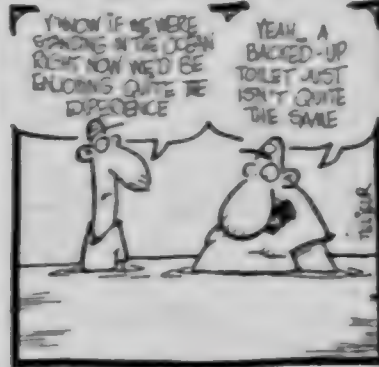

"I'm so proud of you!"

"You're not just my kid, you're my friend."

"I'll always love you!"

THE CHASE: Haliburton men's soccer team player Lutz Haedicke chases down the ball during Sunday's match against Midland United at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School.

Haliburton soccer team takes top spot in Muskoka league

Haliburton has compiled three wins since their first game against Collingwood, putting their team in first place overall in the Muskoka league.

Their second game, on May 28, was against the Bracebridge squad who have a young team this year.

In the first half, Haliburton opened the scoring with Nico Haedicke scoring two unassisted goals. In the second half, Mike Morrison of Haliburton scored to make it 3 - 0 with a beautiful chip shot.

Bracebridge scored a lone goal in the last two minutes of play to bring the score close but the game ended in a 3 - 1 win for Haliburton.

Haliburton's third game on June 4 was against the Barrie team. Barrie scored the first goal of the game in the first twenty minutes. Hans Walters of Haliburton scored the equalizer with a difficult header.

In the second half of the game, Haliburton went on top with a goal from Jan Haedicke. The "Hammer Shot" is back again.

In their last game Haliburton clobbered an extremely young Huntsville team. Haliburton controlled the game for the full 90 minutes from Lutz Haedicke, Jan Haedicke, Ivor Thompson, Steve Dunec and Hans Walter all scoring one goal apiece.

This was Haliburton's first shut-out this season also as the game ended in a 5 - 0 win for Haliburton.

Next home game is on June 25 at 1:00 p.m.

Fishing free-for-all in July

Pull out the tackle boxes, polish up your lures and prepare to wet a line, because for three days, during Ontario Family Fishing Weekend, you don't need a licence to go fishing. It's the perfect opportunity for a family outing!

Through July 7 to 9, the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources will lift the mandatory requirement for all Ontario resident adult (18 to 65) anglers to carry with them a licence to fish. This weekend of licence-free fishing will give many people a chance to reacquire themselves with one of Ontario's finest natural recreational resources.

The Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters helped initiate and fully supports the O.M.N.R.'s temporary relaxing of licensing requirements. Angling is a multi-billion dollar industry in Canada with one in three people fishing recreationally in this country - that's three million people wetting lines every summer in this province alone! But some potential anglers no longer take the opportunity to enjoy the great outdoors. Ontario Family Fishing Weekend is a wonderful way for people to enjoy the angling experience and rekindle an interest in the great outdoors and that's the key: people who use the environment will work to protect the environment.

During this special weekend, all laws and safety regulations as well as reduced "conservation" catch limits are in effect.

Orioles roost at the top of the league

The Orioles started the week by knocking off a stubborn Lindsay team 5 - 3. Lindsay scored a run in the top of the first and held that lead through three complete innings. However, three straight hits by MacDonald, Hughes and Johnston produced two Oriole runs in the fourth vaulting the O's into a 2 - 1 lead.

The Orioles continued hitting in the fifth as once again consecutive singles from Henry, Roberts and Hebert, sandwiched with an RBI groundout and a show single produced three runs. The Oriole pitching staff held the opposition to two runs over the final two frames for a hard earned victory.

The Oriole's next action came in Coboconk where the O's pulled off a disappearing act mid-way into the game.

A game that was enroute to bring a blow-out turned into the second loss of the season - both being away from the friendly confines of Tagalder Gardens.

The O's stacked themselves to a 9 - 0 lead after three complete innings.

At this point in the game every Oriole player had reached base, with eight of nine batsman scoring at least once.

However, the O's bats disappeared as all the damage that had been inflicted in early innings was over. The home team seized the moment, scoring ten runs in the final two innings to win a 10 - 9 decision.

The finale for the week was a home game against an unusually tough Bobcaygeon team.

The Orioles started quickly, as lead-off batter Bobby Hebert came around to score in the first courtesy of a stolen base and an RBI single from Johnston.

The O's scored five times in the second inning as Mulholland, Henry, English, Cooper and Roberts all scored. Bobcaygeon managed to nick the Oriole pitchers for two runs in their half of the third and three more in the fourth.

However, the Orioles players refuse to have any team come into their park and place a blemish on a perfect home record - answering with five runs, as nine Oriole batsmen went to the plate in their half. Final score: O's - 12, Bobcaygeon - 7.

Next action for the West Guilford Shopping Centre O's is a road game in Fenelon Falls and a home engagement with their 'cross town rivals, the Royals.

Auditor says Stanhope's books sound

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at Wednesday's monthly meeting of Stanhope Council.

The municipality's auditor says Stanhope's books are in sound financial order, though they could be in even better shape if council cracked down on property owners who aren't paying their taxes on time.

"Your tax arrears are higher than they should be, but they are not out of line with the area," Wayne Carter of the accounting firm Humpage, Taylor and McDonald told councillors.

The firm audited the municipality's books of December 13, 1994 in order to get a "snapshot" of the year.

Carter said about 14 per cent of the taxes the municipality should have collected in 1994 were outstanding. By the time interest on late payments is added, he said, 17 per cent of the municipality's taxes would be considered in arrears.

Council should aim at reducing this figure to about 10 per cent or lower.

Carter said council could threaten those whose taxes have been in arrears for three years with taking over their property and selling it to recoup the money the municipality is owed.

"It's not nice to have to sell a person's home ... but I think you can use it to scare them into (paying their taxes)," he said.

Reeve Jock Mavor said that because Stanhope is a small community council has to temper its approach with "some humanity," but is serious about retrieving unpaid taxes.

"It may be something we should be addressing a little more diligently," he said.

Clerk-treasurer Gerald Bain said the municipality is already allowing those whose taxes are overdue to repay them on a monthly basis.

Carter said the municipality has done a good job controlling its budget, building up solid reserves, which have helped it offset the outstanding taxes. "On the whole the municipality seems to be in pretty good shape," he said. "The administration and the staff appear to be spending tax dollars in the most diligent way."

Mavor gave Stanhope's clerk-treasurer credit for the municipality's healthy financial standing.

911 Service

Reeve Mavor is hoping to make good on his campaign promise to bring 911 service to the Highlands.

At his first county council meeting after being elected in the fall, Mavor told councillors of his intent to start the process of setting up the emergency response service.

Now he and his council are giving the county a formal push to get the ball rolling.

At his urging, Stanhope councillors passed a resolution asking the county to support the initiation of a county-wide civic address system that could be used as the foundation for 911.

"I think it requires agreement in principle on a county level before we tell our fire chief to begin a numbering system for our municipality," he said.

Mavor was surprised that council agreed with his recommendation so readily.

"Maybe I was being a lot more pessimistic," he said when no one raised any concerns. "I thought there would be a lot more talk about that, but it just makes common sense, I guess."

Mavor said a Bell representative will be at county council's next meeting to discuss the details of establishing 911 service.

Three-way stop

Mavor had hoped to see a three-way stop sign put up at the intersection of St. Peter's Church Rd. and North Shore Rd, but backed down on the idea when he received little support.

Mavor told members of council the Ministry of Transportation wants to see evidence that the intersection is hazardous before it considers approving a three-way stop.

Currently, there is a stop sign on St. Peter's Rd. where it meets North Shore.

In addition to the stop sign, there is a sign warning cars of a yield sign ahead, as well as a yield sign on North Shore Rd.

"I was just concerned by my own personal observation by the number of people who don't stop at the stop sign," said Mavor. "However, I'm a minority and I bow to the majority."

"Aftercare is one of the most important services a funeral home can offer."

"Many people don't know where to turn after the loss of a loved one. Oftentimes, family and friends aren't sure what they can do or say to help. That's why we have formed a grief recovery group.

While a support group doesn't make problems disappear, it does give people a chance to talk with others who are experiencing similar emotions.

It's important that people find a way to express their grief and learn to deal with it. That's when the healing begins."

Hospital restructuring plan almost ready for tender

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The following are brief reports of items discussed at Wednesday night's meeting of the Acting Health Services Board.

Moving ahead

After going through four drafts, the terms of reference for the project management plan is almost ready. Ted Wilkes reported that the restructuring committee has been working on the draft with executive director Foster Loucks and hopes it will be sent to the Ministry of Health for approval sometime soon. Once the Ministry gives its okay, the board can formally adopt the terms of reference at its July meeting and the project can go to tender.

Many firms have already expressed interest in the plan, which would include deciding on the number of long-term and acute care beds in Haliburton and the emergency services in Minden. Preference will be given to those firms which can see the plan through to fruition, including all architectural work.

As well, two doctors and someone from the Hyland Crest Board of Management have been asked to sit on the restructuring committee. Approximately half of the money allocated by the province for capital projects will be spent on the county-owned home for the aged.

Fundraising

Although no specific projects are ready to be announced, plans for raising the $3-million county share are progressing, reported fundraising committee chairwoman, Rheta Jones. Work is also beginning on establishing a Foundation, which will oversee all donations. The Foundation by-laws will probably be formalized at the same time the Board hires a lawyer to help it through the process of becoming incorporated.

Elections

The new chairman, Paul Heffer, and vice chairmen, Hugh Nichol and David Coulson, were given the board's unanimous approval.

"The activity you're about to take on is not going to be easy," says outgoing chairman Stuart Baker, who thanked the three men for taking on the added responsibility. "We have cleared some hurdles but it sometimes seems that when you think you're over the higher hurdle, another one is put up that seems just as high."

Hospital issues pose a challenge

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The Acting Health Services Board is starting to get a taste of the problems it will encounter when it takes over ownership of the two local hospitals.

And it's sometimes going to be a bitter pill to swallow.

When executive director Foster Loucks gave his report to the board at Wednesday night's meeting in Minden, he shared some of the operational challenges facing the Minden and Haliburton Hospitals.

St. Joseph's Hospital in Peterborough, which presently owns the hospitals, wants the budgets to be balanced this year. In the past, the two local hospitals have run up large deficits, and St. Joseph's has always covered them by making cuts in its own operations. No more.

Balancing the budget will be very difficult because the two hospitals are already "running on a shoestring," Loucks says. The Ministry of Health has also said that it will not provide any additional operating funds when the two hospitals are restructured.

Several members of the nursing staff at the Minden Hospital have been given lay-off notices. Because there aren't enough local doctors to keep the emergency department open 24-hours a day, outside doctors have been hired. But that additional cost means the hospital can no longer keep the nine in-patient beds open and fewer staff members are required to keep the hospital in operation.

With nine fewer beds in the county, doctors are having to go farther afield to find beds for their patients. Other hospitals already have enough demands on their resources.

Haliburton doctors have reopened negotiations about how they will be compensated for their work at the Haliburton Hospital.

"You can't avoid the operational pressures," says Loucks, who's been spending most of his time at the hospitals even though he was hired to work on board issues 40% of his time. (That division of time will be a mute point once the board takes over ownership of the hospitals.)

The county has offered Loucks and his assistant, Cathy Outram, office space at the registry office building free of charge. Loucks also wants to buy a computer to help with such things as developing a data base, financial analysis and labour issues.

Independent bus operator loses route to cost cuts

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at Tuesday night's meeting of the Haliburton County Board of Education's management committee.

Bus transfer

An independent bus operator who takes Haliburton County students from the Harcourt and Highland Grove areas to high school in North Hastings has likely reached the end of the line on the run he has operated for the past 15 years.

Charles Mullett appeared before the committee to make a last-ditch appeal to save the run.

However, the board has already agreed to a proposal by the board of education in Hastings. It can accommodate the 28 Haliburton students on two of its buses that have free seats.

Superintendent of business administration Jim Bradley told trustees the consolidation will save the board $25,000.

Mullett argued his bus, which is only two years old, is in much better condition than the vehicles used by North Hastings and would cause fewer disruptions because of maintenance problems.

He asked the trustees to reconsider their plan to abandon his run in favour of sending the students on the Hastings' buses.

Though Bradley said he sympathized with Mullett because he is an independent, he said the board had already made its decision.

"We should be making every effort to consolidate our buses wherever possible," said board chairman John Munro.

Day care

Wee Care, which has been operating day care services after classes at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School, has asked to use a portable at the school to offer day care throughout the summer.

Committee members are recommending that the board allow Wee Care to use the portable, provided its staff clean it up and look after any maintenance.

Bradley said Wee Care expects to look after up to 25 kids a day during July and August.

Fare too high

Trustees briefly discussed extending one of the board's northern bus routes to pick up a Dorset area student who wants to attend HHSS next year for its athletics programs, but decided the bus fare would be too high.

Bradley says the Kawagama Lake R.R. student currently attends high school in Muskoka. Next year he wants to enroll at HHSS because he is interested in the school's extracurricular activities, particularly its football program.

It would cost the board $12,000 in transportation costs to extend the bus route, said Bradley. However, because the board would save $7,000 in tuition it currently pays the Muskoka board of education to teach the student, the net cost would be $5,000.

Trustees, however, did not feel such a large expenditure would be justified for a single student.

"Spending $12,000 to pick up one kid is not worth it," said Dysart et al trustee Chip Trueman. "We've got to stop spending money so foolishly."

Minden OPP are revealing few details concerning the discovery of skeletal remains in a remote area near Dorset.

A local camper is reported to have found objects which eventually led to the discovery of the bones. They had appeared to have been there "for some time," say police.

Police haven't said what day the remains were discovered. Foul play has not been ruled out.

A forensic anthropologist is assisting police in identifying the remains, which were examined at the Centre of Forensic Sciences Wednesday.

Police said yesterday that the forensic results were not available yet.

Community living is a partnership

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

It takes all kinds of people to make a community and last Tuesday night, The Haliburton County Association for Community Living took time to say thanks to all the people who make this county such a vibrant place to live.

"It's been a year of learning and growing," said President Susan Newell at the annual general meeting at the Haliburton Legion. "At times I felt buried with paperwork because of all the changing legislation" but the many rewards more than compensated for that.

It's important to salute the people who have worked hard this past year, she said — the volunteers, the staff and the people who hire the people the Association serves. Certificates and pins were handed out as a way of saying thanks.

Executive director Cheryl Curry said she recently attended the Association's provincial conference. The recurring theme was "Listening to the Stories." One man told of his years locked away in an institution. Now he's got a job and this year he's going to achieve his ultimate goal; he's getting married.

With all the paperwork and bureaucratic headaches, it's sometimes easy to forget that it's because of people such as this man, and the 23 local Association members, that the Association itself is a vital part of this community.

"We must support these people so they can work on their goals and their dreams," she said, adding that the community "is really starting to open up its arms."

Reflecting on her work with the Association, she said "I've learned far more from them than I've given to them. Please listen to their stories because they're important."

Throughout the evening the Association took time to recognize all the people who have contributed to its success.

Dale Jarvis and her sister Lynne Tate (who is on the board of directors) were thrilled and honoured to receive a plaque in honour of their father, the late Wilf Jarvis.

"Wilf gave so much to our organization but the most important thing he ever did was come in and give us a smile," said Curry. The plaque says "In loving memory of Wilf Jarvis. His dedication, spirit and encouragement will always be remembered."

Treasurer Gerry Dawson, who has been with the Association since its incorporation in 1961, was also honoured for his ongoing support and dedication.

In turn, Dawson said "I think the Association can be justifiably proud of its achievements." It runs four programs for the 23 adults it serves and has survived a "somewhat difficult year" in terms of provincial funding restraints.

Staff members were given pins, including one for Maureen O'Hara, the longest-serving employee with the Haliburton Association.

The audience applauded when Curry announced that the Association's newsletter, The Chronicle, won an award for the best Association newsletter in Ontario. Jamie Vos, Gloria Kent and Elena Bjelis accepted.

A WARM SMILE REMEMBERED: Cheryl Curry, centre, presents a plaque to Dale Jarvis and Lynne Tate in memory of their father, Wilf Jarvis, who always brought a smile to the Association.

AWARD WINNING TEAM: President Susan Newell, left, presents Jamie Vos, Elena Bjelis and Gloria Kent an award for producing the best Association newsletter in Ontario.

DEDICATION RECOGNIZED: Treasurer Gerry Dawson, right, has been with the Association since its incorporation in 1961. Here, President Susan Newell presents him with a small gift of thanks.

New laws help those who can't always help themselves

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

When you write a will, you have control about what happens after you die.

New legislation gives people more control over what happens to them when they're still alive.

"For the first time, the law supports your right to say what kinds of things you would want done for you," says Paddy Kamen of the Ontario Advocacy Commission. She and Commission chairman David Reville were guest speakers at the annual general meeting of the Haliburton County Association for Community Living on Wednesday night at the Haliburton Legion.

They spoke on three new pieces of interlocking legislation: the Consent to Treatment Act, the Substitute Decisions Act and the Advocacy Act. Unlike some people who see the new laws as an intrusion, they say the laws provide safeguards that are very much needed.

When Reville was young, he was placed in a psychiatric institution against his will. "We were all locked in this ward and couldn't get out," he says.

David Reville

Administration decided the residents would bathe once a week. They'd have to undress in the hallway and line up for their turn. If you didn't want to go in the shower room, attendants were there to force you to.

"No human being can be treated in that way. It's not the type of society we want," says

Reville. Some of the people in the audience would heartily agree, having been institutionalized before they came to Haliburton, where the Association helps people live independently in the community. With the new laws, people are given more autonomy over their own lives.

"We're trying to change systems and attitudes and values," Reville said. "We need to get out of labelling. We are people and we have strengths and weaknesses."

In times of weakness, people sometimes need someone to make decisions for them. Kamen explained how the Substitute Decisions Act allows people to plan for those times.

People should appoint a power of attorney, one for finances and one for personal care (or one for both responsibilities.) A power of attorney can't be someone who provides the person services for which they are being paid. (There's an exception for family members.) The person should be appointed before accident or illness strikes so you can make your wishes clear to them. You can hire a lawyer to do the paperwork, but you don't have to. Forms are available through your MPP's office.

"If you're in a position where a health practitioner says you're not capable of making a decision, you get rights advice," says Kamen of another important part of the new legislation. A formal assessment is carried out. The only downside is the cost — anywhere from $400 to $1200. When members of the audience moaned, Kamen nodded her head. "This is concerning," she agreed. She hopes changes will be made.

It is not necessary to draft a list of all possible scenarios, with instructions on what is to be done. "The main thing is who we want to make decisions for us rather than guess what those decisions will be. However, the person has to be taking your values into consideration (when decisions are made.)"

For financial decisions, if you had no power of attorney under the old system, your spouse would have to go to court to be able to dispose of joint assets. Now the spouse applies to a public trustee.

The Advocacy Acts is designed to protect anyone who is vulnerable from disability, illness or age. Advocates can be hired in each community, or the work can be done by volunteers.

"The best advocate you get is usually someone who loves you and that's often a volunteer," Reville said. "We could never possibly hire enough advocates to do the work we want to."

Social service agencies fear cuts

by STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Reporter

'I think the writing is on the wall for cuts to child-care funding.'

Local support agencies are bracing themselves for what they fear will be drastic funding cuts as Premier Mike Harris launches his plan to balance the provincial books.

"This is one instance when I sincerely hope a political leader won't keep his promise. Hopefully history will repeat itself," says Sue Grieves, executive director of C.H.A.C.E.

The local child care agency, which relies on $200,000 annually in provincial funding to operate its three centres in Haliburton and Minden, could be forced to reduce the services it offers to parents in the county if funding is further slashed, says Grieves.

"It's scary... I think the writing is on the wall for cuts to child care funding. We've been taking little cuts annually for four years now and if Mike Harris implements the kinds of cuts he's talking about then I don't think we'd have too much of an option other than to look at the level of services we provide."

Grieves says the PC plan to slash welfare premiums and implement its 'workfare' program will lead to a "ghetto mentality" and further harm the health and welfare of families who have fallen on hard times.

Unless the workfare program created involves retraining people who are unemployed and giving them the skills required to find future jobs, "it isn't going to fly," she says. "It has to give people the opportunity to retrain so they can find a job or it isn't going to stop the cycle of dependency... Part of my fear is that people will become judgmental about those who are genuinely in need of assistance."

Grieves doesn't dispute the need for fiscal restraint and eliminating abuse of the system, "but I'm fearful the cuts will be severe and will hurt our social security net."

With the federal government's recent budget slash of provincial transfer fees and the newly-elected Harris government planning major tax and spending cuts, "we are very scared there is going to be a direct impact on us in funding," says Cheryl Curry, executive director of the Haliburton County Association For Community Living (ACL).

ACL, which provides services to help adults who are developmentally challenged achieve their goals, receives about $480,000 annually in provincial funding.

"I have major fears," says Curry of looming funding cuts. "We've heard through the grapevine that because of the federal transfer cuts and Harris's plan to cut taxes there are going to be major funding cuts as high as double-digits."

"The hardest part is not knowing what's in store. It's hard to plan for the unknown."

Gena Robertson, executive director of SIRCH (Supportive Initiatives for the Residents of Haliburton County), an umbrella organization operating various local support agencies, says she anticipates an increase in the demand for family services.

"I don't know what's coming in terms of cuts to social services but I do know that the needs we meet are certainly not going to get any less," says Robertson, adding that "everyone is thinking about" funding decreases. "I'm a pragmatist. When (cuts) happen we'll deal with it but I'm not going to go around the next year wondering whether we'll be here or not."

SIRCH receives about $350,000 in funding from the province to operate its family counselling and mental health support services.

Robertson points to a 1993 study which she says shows that 70 per cent of the working population in the county earn less than $20,000. If welfare premiums are reduced, as promised by the incoming government, "it will only be more difficult for those people who are neediest to deal with day to day life."

"A lot more people will be in need of budget counselling and mental health counselling. If you combine that with cutbacks to support services it will be a pretty chaotic society," Robertson says.

Re-elected Victoria-Haliburton MPP Chris Hodgson was reluctant to comment on the concerns of local social service agencies saying it's too early to say what cuts may or may not be in store. "We haven't even been sworn into office yet," said Hodgson via telephone Thursday from Toronto, where the newly elected Progressive Conservative government held its first caucus meeting.

"We've been given a mandate to bring about major changes to government, reduce the tax burden and eliminate the deficit." The PC campaign platform promised to reduce government spending by $6 billion in the next term.

O'Reilly hoping 'common sense' prevails

by STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Reporter

The Progressive Conservative party's plan to cut welfare payments will make life more difficult for Haliburton's seasonal workers, says local Liberal MP John O'Reilly.

"I'm hoping that the 'Common Sense Revolution' was just election strategy and that common sense will prevail," said O'Reilly when asked to comment on the outcome of the provincial election which swept Mike Harris into power.

Harris's promise to cut 20 per cent off welfare cheques and to implement a work-for-welfare program will be "really damaging to Haliburton," O'Reilly said.

"We're dealing with seasonal workers who aren't out of work by choice... If we go too far to the right wing we'll have to worry about the people who get trampled. Surely to God we haven't gone that far to the right to demean people. What are they going to do, have people go out and chop wood for their dinner?"

On the brighter side, Chris Hodgson's re-election as MPP will have positive spinoffs for the riding, said O'Reilly, optimistic that having two elected representatives sitting in majority governments will mean more opportunities for the riding.

"I think that is a real advantage to the people of Victoria-Haliburton. I sent a congratulatory letter to (Hodgson) and said 'let's keep the infrastructure money coming in.'"

O'Reilly attributed the PC election landslide to a combination of the victors' well-run campaign and the provincial Liberals' lack of focus.

"Certainly I think the Liberals ran a poor campaign. They just couldn't seem to find a sense of direction. The PCs didn't lose sight of its agenda."

Matt German, a student from a visiting military-style academy, gets a hand up the wall at Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve.

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

THEY'RE VERY intelligent, very stubborn and very often deep in trouble.

And last week, these young students, described by one of their teachers as "mass manipulators," travelled from their private military-style school in Wellandport to Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve for three days of exercises to boost their battered self esteem.

The school the students attend, Robert Land Academy, has received a fair amount of media coverage recently, ever since Premier Mike Harris cited it as the type of facility he would like to see Ontario's young offenders sent to rather than juvenile detention centres.

"Harris has referred to it as a boot camp in the papers, but it's not a boot camp," explains Lieutenant Mark Roe, who has taught art at the academy for two years. "It's a military-themed school set up for students who generally don't fit in the public system."

The reason the students typically don't do well in a classroom with 30 other students isn't because they are not intelligent, he said, but because they are highly individualistic and don't want to conform.

"The way that shows up is in problems with their teachers, with the law, with their parents, with their peers and any other figures of authority," he said.

It may seem strange then that students who have such difficulty with authority respond so well in a strict military environment, but that is exactly what happens, say Robert Land teachers.

"Having a military structure gives people a very good idea of who's who and what their places are," said Captain Craig Gibson, who has taught math and geography at the academy for the past four years.

Founded 16 years ago by General Scott Bowman, the small school has 15 part-time and full-time teachers and 115 boys from Grade 7 to the OAC level.

All students and staff at the academy wear military-style uniforms and are ranked based on accomplishment and hard work.

And, as in the military, any behaviour judged out of line is dealt with quickly and severely.

Students who misbehave or don't finish their school work are forced to do push-ups, jumping jacks or run laps wearing their army boots during lunch and dinner breaks. They may be required to wear full back packs while doing laps, depending on the severity of the breach of the disciplinary code.

A student heard swearing by staff will be told to take a drink of cod liver oil and keep it in his mouth for a minute.

Any student who does not salute a staff member is given the minimum punishment of 10 push ups.

Students are to refer to all staff as sir (or ma'am in the case of the one female teacher who works at the academy.)

The structure is rigorous and the labour grueling, but it pays off with students who have become used to getting their own way with parents and teachers.

"What starts to happen is that the students start to realize with all of the hard work there are a lot of successes," said Lieut. Roe. "They start realizing they are not stupid and that they didn't fail because they're dumb. In the first year, most students' grades shoot up by about 20 per cent."

And with their achievements, the students, who usually arrive with little or no self esteem, begin to see themselves in a more positive light, he said.

They are also able to earn more respect and more privileges by proving they can handle responsibility.

Grade 10 student Syrus Soltani said his grades and his behaviour have both improved since he started at Robert Land in September.

"The school's been helping me out a lot, sir," he said.

The Mississauga native said he failed Grade 9 last year and would not have been able to continue on into Grade 10 if he hadn't been able to enroll at the academy.

He intends to return to the school for Grade 11 in September and says the disciplinary code he has learned will help him in the future.

Schoolmate Pierre-Philip Hamel of Montreal said he was having problems at home with his parents and had been kicked out of his former school.

Since he began at the academy in September, however, the Grade 9 student says his grades have gone up and his relationship with his parents has improved.

"I didn't like it at the school at first because it was severe military and everything, but it helps a lot," he said. "Nobody likes it, but it is very good."

Because the tuition to attend the school is so high — it costs $18,500 a year to send a student there — the majority of the students come from fairly wealthy homes.

"Ninety-nine per cent of our boys come from upper middle-class homes or above that," said Capt. Gibson. "Then there is a small percentage where mom or dad have mortgaged the house and it's a last resort."

There are also cases where the academy makes exceptions for some students and offers them partial or full scholarships.

While at Haliburton Forest, the students went canoeing, mountain biking, rock climbing and did a number of other outdoor activities.

"This is a year-end activity where we all come together to work as a team and build self esteem," said Lieut. Roe.

Rhubarb showdown set for July

Marj Kennedy and I went to Shedden! Two, more dissimilar places in Ontario, than Shedden and Eagle Lake, would be hard to find. The people, however, are warm, friendly and welcoming.

On Saturday we were given a spot to display our Eagle Lake/Haliburton literature and a map. "Where on earth is Eagle Lake?" was the opening for most conversations.

They are raising $500,000 to build a new community centre and the total dedication and commitment of the community was impressive. Already they have raised ten percent of the cost.

There were gentle jabs as to which centre is the Rhubarb Capital, aided and abetted by all the media of southern Ontario.

The final face-off and solution will be staged at the opening ceremonies of the Eagle Lake Rhubarb Festival, 10:00 a.m., Saturday, July 15.

Our temerity, hospitality, ability to stage a large event and pride of place are all being challenged. One month to go and we welcome participation. Someone in charge of parking, garbage control, crafts people, cooks, vendors of all sorts and baking judges are needed.

There will be a county rhubarb baking contest with three categories: Pies, Muffins, Desserts and first, $25, second, $15, third $10 prizes in each category.

Prize winning dishes will be auctioned at opening ceremonies with all proceeds going to the Community Park. (Receipts for income tax purposes given.)

From the RHUBARB PATCH

Ruth Still

We have also been challenged to produce the longest rhubarb stalk (base of leaf to pink root) - 'our soil is poor our climate impossible' - Shedden's measured 39". So check your rhubarb patch. Measuring and prize giving takes place at 4 p.m., Saturday, July 15. Contact 754-2602 or 754-2497.

(Intended for last week)

"Into every like a little rain must fall," nor is the Rhubarb Patch immune. Our community garage sale of Saturday, June 3 was rained out. It will, however, be staged June 17 or on succeeding Saturdays until it is a fine day.

We wonder if Shedden's show rhubarb around their signs is devoured by moose as our has been. Do their cooks have their pie baking to pull quills from the muzzle of the family dog who has just come off second best in a confrontation with a porcupine?

Two Eagle Lakers met the Sheddenites on their home turf, June 9 - 11, at Shedden's Rosy Rhubarb Festival. They attended opening ceremonies Friday evening at which the media was present. More on that in the next column.

Our pie party on June 1 produced 58 pies. From the animated conversation of the six women present one can expect the world will be a better place with more problems solved! Still our rhubarb pies boil over and it is small consolation to be told by two good cooks - "Any good two-crust rhubarb pie boils over."

Via the Honourable Chris Hodgson's office comes two pages of limericks. They are the Grade 11 class project of Ms. Sonja Vandermeer, 16, Weldon Secondary School, Lindsay, Ontario.

There once was a place Eagle Lake.

Sympathy goes out to the family of the late Jessie Stewart (nee Pearce) who died at Milton last week and was buried at Burnt River. Kevin Reltie was also laid to rest in Burnt River last week. Our sympathy goes out to his family.

The community was shocked when Joan Calder from Calder's antiques just north of Norland was instantly killed in a car accident on Monday, June 5 on Brokenshire's Hill, not far from Sunny Acres Trailer Park. Sympathy goes out to the family at this time, and get well wishes to the panel truck driver for Northmore Fuels, who was injured.

Reserve Saturday, June 24 for the giant flea market and yard sale at Ward Park at Norland, sponsored by the Recreation Department.

Construction on the highway through town is coming along very well. I know we certainly have travelled over construction that was much, much rougher than the construction here. Passing by the strawberry patch, I can hardly wait for fresh strawberries! Should be a very good crop!

WIRES AND TREES MEAN TROUBLE.

Cutting down or pruning trees near overhead wires is dangerous. If you are touching a tree or branch that falls into wires, you could be seriously injured or killed. Be extremely careful. Before pruning or felling trees that are near hydro wires, call your local hydro for advice or assistance.

Trivia stimulates the brain

Monday was a usual Fun and Fitness, Fulfilling a Dream Day.

Tuesday Fred McPhail led the Bible Study in the morning and Donna Ibbotson ran the Bingo in the afternoon.

Wednesday Donna kept our brains stimulated with seniors trivia.

On Thursday Dave took us in the DYMO to Rip's Sleepy Hollow for a feast fit for a King. The weather was perfect and the company superb. That night Carl and Terry Upton from The Full Gospel Light House Church entertained us in song to help us celebrate our June Birthdays.

Janet Young's second sale day was held on May 27 and included 10 booths: folk art and ceramics, stained glass, organic herbs and plants, Club 35's quilt raffle, clothing, carpet lengths, flea market, books, garage sale items and (my favourite), Barb Smith's miniature 3-D scenes on fungus, rock or wood made of moss, leaves, birch bark and wisps of whatever it needs to create the scenery. Janet's next sale will be in late fall for Christmas. Her phone number is 754-3909.

Steve Archibald of Medeba called with information and invitation. You are all welcome to attend a lunch and afternoon on July 15 to become acquainted with their work at Medeba's

Ontario Seniors Games up and running across province

If the kids haven't seen much of Grandma and Grandpa the past few months and if the older generation won't be available for the next couple of weeks, it's probably because they are among the 27,000 to 30,000 people older than 55 taking part in this year's Ontario Senior Games. Another 25,000 or so have been, and continue to be involved in the planning, administration and running of the 15 sanctioned events, which are taking place this month in 39 districts across the province: Initiated in 1982 by the Older Adults Association of Ontario the games continue to be a success story in furthering the goals of the organizers: improved physical fitness and recreation involvement.

For further information about Seniors Games in your community, call toll free, 1-800-320-6423 or your local community information centre. Haliburton County Information Centre Inc., (705) 457-2733 Monday to Friday, 10 to 12 and 1 to 4 or (705) 286-4100, Mondays only.

The centre will resume regular hours in Minden every Monday as of June 26, 1995. The new accommodations are in the Court House Building adjacent to the Anson, Hindon and Minden Municipal Office.

Need a telephone number for Beaver River?

There can be nothing more frustrating not to know the telephone number of a person that you want to talk to in Beaver River - or their address - and not have a telephone directory at hand. Thanks to a recent acquisition by the Haliburton County Public Library, this is not necessarily a problem anymore.

The new service is called CanadaPhone, a CD-ROM based database that allows you to search for telephone numbers, addresses, postal codes or whatever, all across Canada. Updated quarterly, it eliminates the need for the library to have just telephone books on hand when we can have them all for a fraction of the cost! Available only at Headquarters in Haliburton village, this latest information resource should prove to be a valuable aid in solving your information needs.

For complete information, contact the County Library at 705-457-2241, Monday to Friday, 9:00 - 5:00 p.m. r Haliburton County Public Library.

Alcohol during pregnancy a risk to child

Smart Choices is a comprehensive alcohol education program designed specifically for the adult public. It's aimed at preventing alcohol problems by providing drinkers with moderation guidelines, and by identifying harmful drinking practices and the associated consequences. The latest Smart Choices poster, 'In Life, Some Things Just Don't Mix', is an important message for pregnant women and their families - pregnancy and alcohol are a risky combination.

Research has not demonstrated any safe level of alcohol consumption either during pregnancy or breast feeding. Abstaining, at least on a temporary basis, is a small sacrifice when a baby's future growth and development is considered.

An evening extravaganza

The Wilberforce talent night last Saturday raised funds for the community centre and delighted a packed house.

On left, the Loop Troupe's Kim Barnes performs a sultry monologue. In middle, the Haliburton Highland Cloggers tap into the hearts of audience members and on the right Gerda Goverde and Kathy Agnew draw laughs with their clown act.

The Community Variety Show was a great success. Many thanks to all the entertainers who took part and gave their best performances. Thanks also to Ken Noble who did such a great job as M.C., and to the Brownies and their leader, Mary Barker, who served the cookies and coffee and cleaned up the kitchen afterwards. And a grateful thanks goes to the audience, who served the cookies and coffee and cleaned up the kitchen afterwards. And a grateful thanks goes to the audience, who filled the hall and gave us a hundred percent support. All our efforts together raised $450.45, and that's a great night's work. I'm sure the renovating committee for the Lloyd Watson Center will be very happy to receive this donation.

The Monmouth Seniors' Club held their annual election of officers on June 13. Much interest was shown and 39 members turned up to cast their ballots. The new executive members are president, Floyd Tighe; 1st vice president, Joan Clark; 2nd vice president, Ernie Hemphill, 3rd vice president, Ted Deterling. The treasurer is Margaret Jeske, recording secretary, Elsie Lewis and the executive secretary is Mary Moore.

The Heritage Guild is planning an exhibit of Gertrude Miller artwork at the Red Cross Outpost Historic House this summer. If you own, or know the whereabouts of any of Gertrude Miller's paintings, and would be willing to lend them to the Guild for five weeks, please call Cathy at 448-2211 or Hilda at 448-2018.

There will be a work bee at the Essonville Historic Church on June 24 to finish painting and generally clean up. Please bring your ladder, lunch and paint brushes. This is the first work detail this year and we hope a good crew will show up to help keep this lovely old building in usable condition.

A Happy Birthday to Canada party will be held in front of the Lloyd Watson Center at 11 a.m. The Royal Canadian Legion will be at the ceno-taph, and the Heritage Guild will serve cake and coffee after. Come and help celebrate Canada's birthday.

The Wilberforce United Church women will hold their annual Strawberry Supper on July 1, from 5 - 7 p.m., at the Lloyd Watson Center. The cost for adults is $7.00, for children under 12 it is $4 and pre-schoolers are free. The women of the United Church have been having this supper for years and it is always most enjoyable.

Intended for last week:

Have you noticed how many geese are flying over? Some are even landing on Dark Lake.

Shouldn't they be nesting somewhere by now? That's what we thought, and we were right. This morning a pair of geese and four babies swam along the shore. We have never had them nest so close, as far as we know.

The Monmouth Seniors Club had a visit from the Haliburton Club on June 6, and it was a delightful afternoon.

The Haliburton Highland Cloggers were noisy but very lively. We thank Bonnie and John for coming from West Guilford to lead his class. Ross Covert played some toe tappers on the violin accompanied by Gertrude Godfrey on the piano. Tom Coghlan is so obliging, he always comes to entertain us when we ask him, and we really enjoy his way with a song. We thank all the entertainers who made the afternoon so interesting.

We are sorry to hear that Jean MacDuff is in the hospital in Oshawa. If any of her friends would like to send her a card, please address it to Mrs. Jean MacDuff, Room 3108, Oshawa General Hospital, 24 Alma Street, Oshawa, Ontario L1G 2B9. There is also a pay phone outside her door, which may be called after nine in the evening. The number is 1-905-433-9170.

Burnt River even flowed over the road last week, and the lake is really high. But we mustn't complain. Rain makes the flowers bloom, the grass grow and the garden produce.

There will be a giant "40 Family Yard Sale" from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. on Saturday, July 1 at the Monmouth Curling Club. There will also be a bake table and craft table.

Graduates tour the Big Nickel Mine

GOODERHAM

News

Anne Costeloe
447-2400

The new Mountainview take-out in Gooderham is finally open for business. They are serving delicious home-made all-beef burgers and home-made fries.

For those of us who prefer to barbeque our own burgers, they also sell propane. So this summer we will be able to buy our propane right in "town".

For more information, or to phone in an order, call 447-FILL.

The graduating class from Gooderham Elementary School went on an overnight field trip to Sudbury on June 1 and 2.

They toured the Big Nickel Mine, Science North and stayed overnight at the University Student Residence. Shannon, Sarah and Tracy Billings, Leila Blakey, Julie Graham, Tanya Hunter, Kelly Pettit, Steven Costeloe, Kevin Heywood, Martin

Milligan, David Vickers, and Justin Winder were accompanied by principal Ruth Lewis, teachers Cheryl O'Neil, Steve Smith, and parents Eric Billings, Anne Costeloe and Barb Hunter.

They were really lucky to discover that their (wonderful) bus driver, Don Curry, who now lives in Haliburton, had been a miner in Sudbury for more than thirty years.

During the tour of the mine Don was able to show everyone how the mining tools were used and tell exciting stories about mining - really bringing the adventure to life.

Don and his wife Betty were also able to point out all the landmarks and answer every question the Grade 6 students asked! The whole trip was an exciting (and educational) adventure.

Gooderham Elementary School "Student of the Week" is Tammie Billings. Tammie is being recognized for her work with fractions.

Keep up the good work, Tammie.

Shopping sprees and happy hours highlight week

Sunday, June 4, do I dare tell how old she is? Winnifred Barnum celebrated her 85th birthday. Her family had a party for her in the auditorium. Several friends attended. It was a joyous occasion for Winnie.

Monday morning, 12 residents, Doris, Linda and ten volunteers boarded the bus for a shopping spree in Lindsay. We went to Zellers mall. It was a beautiful day for the trip. Don't know why, but the majority of us headed for the restaurant first. It seems to be number one on the priority list. We had a great time.

In the evening, the Salvation Army entertained in the main lounge.

Tuesday morning Rev. Parker conducted chapel. It was a communion service.

In the afternoon, the folks attended crafts. We were working on several projects. Finally took the quilt off the frame. In the evening, Pearl and Corinne assisted several folks at euchre.

Wednesday morning the residents limbered up with a fitness session under the direction of Doris and Janice.

In the afternoon, Pearl called bingo for the folks. Mabel Deacon assisted. In the afternoon, Bill and the boys sang and played their instruments.

Thursday was election day. A poll booth was located at Hyland Crest. It made it very handy for the residents.

In the afternoon the Eastern Star ladies provided a lovely tea party for the folks. Rev. Burgess and Pat Scott assisted.

Happy hour was well attended on Friday afternoon. Eldon Deacon and Don White provided the great entertainment.

On Saturday, Kathleen Owen played the keyboard in the main lounge.

In the afternoon, there was a fashion show. It was a fund-raiser for Hyland Crest.

Sunday evening, Rev. Burgess delivered the message at chapel service.

Thanks to one and all who helped to make this week a pleasant experience at Hyland Crest. Even a short visit means a lot to some.

Trivia: The average person will drink about 16,000 gallons of water in a lifetime.

If you've wondered where the top real estate agents are, the signs are everywhere.

You can buy or sell a house, but who knows whether you'll be satisfied in the process.

Unless of course you deal with a real estate company that specializes in making their customers satisfied.

And who might that be? RE/MAX.

And how do we know many of our customers are satisfied?

Well, in a recent survey with over ten thousand people, 95% said they were very satisfied with their RE/MAX agent.

Not only were they very satisfied, 92% said they would use their RE/MAX agent again. And 93% would recommend using their RE/MAX agent to friends.

Those are exceptionally high scores indeed. But how do you think we became the number one real estate organization in Canada?

By giving satisfaction.

Call us first.

Lindsay United Church Women
meet in Haliburton

Lindsay Presbyterian United Church
Women Executive Meeting was held in Haliburton on May 31. Mary Winterbottom, Presbyterian president opened the meeting with an appropriate spring meditation on the beauty and fragrance of flowers and how our lives should be like these flowers bringing joy and happiness to others. Willie Cox, president of Haliburton U.C.W. welcomed the 25 women in attendance. Worship led by Irene Holder gave us much food for thought on interpreting the statement, "O, Lord What a Morning!"

Margaret Ingram gave a brief report on her attendance at Ecumenical Decade Event. Dates for rallies and planning meetings were announced: Rally C - April 24, 1996, Oakwood (planning meeting September 11 at Queen Street,
Lindsay), Rally A - May 1, 1996, Dalrymple (planning meeting September
6 at Cannington). Rallies B and D, not definite.

The Presbyterian officers gave reports.
Margaret Ingram spoke about the African event she attended and the concerns with problems re: the World Bank and International Monetary Fund. She encouraged everyone to write to Members of Parliament expressing their concerns. Marianne Knight told of concerns with elder abuse and some information she has available. She is also available to speak to groups. Carol Thompson told of several resources for Stewardship programming. Joyce Jones introduced the newest Mandate magazine which has excellent ideas. Jean Gorrill asked for volunteers for 2nd vice president. Grace Sisson wants to add to her collection of church pictures. Much discussion took place re: officers who are co-chairs and their expenses to events away from Presbyterian. A motion was carried to pay one person's registration and mileage to such events.

Following the singing of grace, the ladies enjoyed their bag lunches and muffins and beverages provided by Haliburton U.C.W.

The meeting re-convened with a hymn sing led by Marian Thurston accompanied by Karleen Ferguson at the piano. A short business period followed and following dates announced:

• Camp Quin-Mo-Lac - September 8, 9, 10.

• Mid-Week Event (Collin's Bay) -
November 1 and 2.

• Planning meeting for Annual and A
Day Apart - July 11 at 10 a.m. at Mary Winterbottom's home - pot luck lunch.

• A Day Apart - October 21, 1995 at Norland

• Fall Executive - October 11, 1995 at Cambridge Street, Lindsay.

Following courtesies given by Joyce Jones, Mary Winterbottom closed with a suitable poem.

Firefighters' pig roast a great feast

DORSET

News

Phyllis Briscoe
766-2237

Belated birthday wishes to Vi Elms, Brad Robinson, Ila Griffin, Lorraine Weatherell, Courtney Morris, Matthew MacKay and Joey Rathkowsky.

Mother Nature has a way of showing that she is boss, and she laid one on me that sent me to hospital for a few days and slowed me up for a bit, but better times ahead, I'm sure. I wish to thank everyone for the kind deeds and thoughtful expressions of consideration shown me during my illness.

The Dorset Fire Department annual Pig Roast was a great success from what I hear, and the food was abundant and delicious as usual. The first one I have missed in many years.

A great deal of hard work goes into the preparation of this feast and the men and ladies who do the preparations are to be commended. They, also send out complimentary dinners to various people who live alone and don't have easy access to transportation so they can enjoy dinner at home. This is really great and appreciated by the recipients.

The quarter of beef raffled off by the Dorset Lions Club recently, was won by Lionell Griffith of Dorset with ticket #585. We congratulate the winner.

The Dorset Senior Club is holding its annual Flea Market and Bake Sale on Saturday, July 1 at the club rooms on Rte. 117, just south of Dorset. The sale will begin at 9 a.m.

What is so rare as a day in June? It would be rare indeed, if it were not for the beastly black flies.

H.H. Having ant trouble? Try bay leaves scattered along window sills and in cupboards.
